10:30 BUILDING A SUSTAINABLE AND RESILIENT PHARMA SUPPLY CHAIN BEYOND COVID-19

- How has the pandemic changed our way of thinking? What are the main priorities for the pharma supply chain today compared to three years ago?
- Integrating sustainable practices into the supply chain is an increasingly important business focus, but how can sustainability become a company asset rather than a box-ticking exercise?
- How can companies assess the latest technologies to determine which are making a difference to their supply chain and delivering return on investment?
- What can we do to shape the workforce of the future? How do we train and encourage new talent into the life sciences and logistics industries, and how do we create a diverse, forward-thinking leadership?
- Future challenges and opportunities: is it possible to build in bullet-proof resilience to supply chain disruptions?

11:00 MORNING BREAK: NETWORKING AND REFRESHMENTS

11:40 CLINICAL TRIAL LOGISTICS

Presentation

12:10 MANAGING MEDICINE SHORTAGES: REDUCING THE IMPACT ON THE PHARMA SUPPLY CHAIN

- Lessons learned after the pandemic and other crises impacting global supply chain, e.g. looking at insecure markets, raw material / energy supply, uncertain customers / distributors or unreliable suppliers and the effects on the pharma supply chain
- Analysing the collaboration between all supply chain stakeholders
- Challenges, solutions, best practice and forecast for a functioning supply chain for advanced therapy manufacturing

12:40 HOW THE CONTROL TOWER BECAME MISSION CRITICAL TO VACCINE DISTRIBUTION – CASE STUDY

The COVID-19 pandemic shed light on supply chain vulnerabilities, but it also has led to opportunities to improve processes and accelerated technology adoption. Thankfully, over the last several years, the pharmaceutical supply chain has increased its use of real-time technology and cloud-enabled analytics. Resilient pharma companies are using tools that provide the historical, live, and predictive analytics capabilities that allow them to quickly adjust course when needed. The future supply chain will have resilience woven throughout each link. It will be based on visibility, collaboration, and automation.

Presentation by Ada Palmadottir, VP of Business Development, Controlant, and Tomas Fant, Temperature Control Logistics Global Projects Lead, Pfizer

12:00 IS BETTER TEMPERATURE CONTROL THE RESPONSIBILITY OF LOGISTICS COMPANIES, OR SHOULD PHARMA STEP UP AND LEAD BY EXAMPLE?

Pharma companies can have very special requirements for their temperature-controlled shipments. Scientifically unique items can be very vulnerable to changes in defined conditions, and pharma companies understand their products intimately. On the other hand, logistics companies have the knowhow and expertise about the packaging solutions and processes available to fulfill all possible requirements. This presentation will discuss how to combine all this expertise in the best possible way to create successful, compliant and cost-effective services.

Presentation by Maria Lahtinen, VP Operations, Faron Pharmaceuticals
